

Miss Elizabeth Darlington Married To Dr. Charles Augustus Simpson

Noon Wedding at Home of Bride's Father Today.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Darlington, daughter of J. J. Darlington, to Dr. Charles Augustus Simpson, took place today at noon in the home of the bride's father, 2020 Twenty-first street, the Rev. John Briggs, of the Fifth Baptist Church, officiating.

A string orchestra furnished the wedding music and an appropriate musical program during the reception, and wedding breakfast which followed.

An artistic arrangement of palms, combined with yellow roses and chrysanthemums, in the drawing room, pink roses in the music room, and white flowers in the dining room formed the decorations.

Miss Darlington was escorted to the improvised altar and given in marriage by her father. She wore a beautiful bridal gown of white embroidered crepe de chine, made with a long train, and a tulle veil, held in place with a wreath of lilies of the valley. Her bouquet was a shower of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Lillian Singleton, wore a draped gown of yellow crepe de chine, trimmed in chiffon, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, Miss Anna Darlington, Miss Lillian Dunn, and Miss Mary Wilson, all of Washington, and Miss Mary Griggs, of Cedarhurst, Ga., also wore yellow crepe de chine, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. They all wore bows of yellow chiffon in their hair.

Dr. A. L. Hunt acted as best man for Dr. Simpson, and the ushers were Dr. Charles Stanley White, Dr. John T. Briscoe, and Hugh Ober, of Washington, and Dr. Marlon Penicet, of Cuba.

Wedding Breakfast
Follows the Ceremony.

A reception and wedding breakfast from 12:30 to 2 o'clock followed the ceremony. Among the out of town guests were Mrs. Fannie Simpson, of New Haven, Conn., mother of the bridegroom; his sister, Mrs. Randall, of Manassas, Va., and Mrs. William Newton, of Norfolk, cousin of the bride.

Dr. and Mrs. Simpson left Washington early in the afternoon for a Northern bridal trip. Mrs. Simpson traveled in a tailored suit of dark blue, with a hat to match. After November 1 they will be at home to their friends at the Northampton hotel.

The bride of today is a charming and attractive young woman, and has acted as her father's hostess since the death of her mother a few years ago. She is a recent graduate of Hollins Institute, Virginia, a cultivated musician, and is present organist of the Fifth Baptist Church. With her father, she has only recently returned from Europe, where they spent the summer.

The bridegroom is a prominent young physician, and is now on the staffs of the George Washington Hospital, Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat, and Emergency Hospitals. He was graduated from the George Washington University with the class of 1906, and since then has spent the greater part of the time in New York, returning to Washington only about a year ago.

The wedding will take place on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 26, at 4:30 o'clock, at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church.

There will be no reception, owing to the illness of the bride's mother. Mrs. William Slaughter Hardesty will be her sister's only attendant, and Dr. Mend Moore will be the brother's best man. The ushers will be Dr. William Slaughter Hardesty, Sidney Tallafier, and Harlan Moore and Clayton Old, of New York.

ever felt the spell of the tropics has done—met the pretty mestizo whose "Papas dealt in vino, which is mineral water stuff."

Made up of concentrated lye, and vitriol, in the rough; And when you've drunk a quart or two they write your friends at home.

And fire a volley o'er your grave, to show a good man's gone."

And while Bromley had heard the old stagers sing this warning to the young ones he felt he must learn, too, and so he drank the mestizo's papa's vino.

Then one day, when the company had chased some of their little brown brothers to the hills and were returning by way of Calaba and San Isidro, Luzon, the heat and his comrade's banter got the better of him, and he started on the road which has wound through prisons, asylums, and is now for the time the path of freedom.

Attacked By Corporal.

The company had been waiting for a raft at the Barrio of San Isidro, July 2, 1900. Who started the trouble is not known. Anyhow, Corporal Joe Fox turned in a rage and swung wildly at Bromley, the steel shod butt of the corporal's "Krag" missing Bromley's head by but the fraction of an inch.

Bromley said nothing. "Joe" Fox was his superior in rank, and the red rage hadn't then reached the point where it surges over rank and discipline, and he was too busy to care.

But when the raft came, and the hot sun on the river glared into Bromley's eyes, the fever of his wrongs began, and he watched his sword corporal.

"Joe" Fox's back was turned when the shot was fired. Bromley said self-defense. His comrades said cold-blooded murder. And on July 21, 1900, a general court-martial, headed by Capt. Ernest V. Smith, concurred in the opinion that it was cold-blooded murder.

Now a soldier may kill another in times of peace and get fifteen or twenty years. But when insurrection is rampant, the articles of war declare that to kill a soldier is a much more grievous offense.

Ninety-nine-Year Term.

So ninety-nine years of imprisonment, the military life sentence, was imposed on the twenty-two-year-old boy. With good behavior, Bromley's sentence will expire in the year 1994.

For a while he was confined at the Manila Presidio, then he came across the seas and half of the continent to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where military strings were drawn, and he was kept in the stocks for a month.

But the finger of Philippine tragedy followed him. One day he seized a table knife and attacked a fellow-prisoner, saying that he was insane, and he came across the rest of the continent to St. Elizabeth's, to join the many broken men who have left their minds among the swamps of the Philippines.

He came to the Government Hospital December 12, 1905, and while known as a dangerous prisoner and confined as such, had for the last year showed marked improvement, and it was hoped that he could soon be returned to the military prison.

REVISION OF COURSES SCHOOL BOARD PLAN

President Cox Favors Allowing Pupil to Choose His Studies.

A general revision of the technical and scientific courses of the high schools is contemplated.

This revision will be made along the lines of the policy of W. V. Cox, president of the Board of Education, to eliminate the frills.

These facts became known today, though no definite arrangements toward the revision have yet been made.

The change will be mainly in the direction of making the courses more elastic so pupils may arrange any combination of subjects they desire.

"The high schools at present give pupils an adequate preparation for college, but a very poor preparation for life," said W. V. Cox.

The head of the Education Board declined to discuss the proposed changes, saying that the board had no direct jurisdiction over the study courses.

"But if my advice is asked," Mr. Cox said, "I will favor the change in the direction of improving conditions for the 90 per cent of pupils who don't go to college."

college rather than for the 10 per cent who do.

"Some of our courses at present are excellently adapted to turn out philosophers, but are not developing doctors, lawyers, business men or anything useful."

Mr. Cox said he advocated a system whereby high school students might pick out the courses they wanted for their life work and lay stress on that subject.

"If a young man does not intend to go to college," Mr. Cox said, "and he wants to study electricity, he should go to the McKinley Manual Training School and there take up the study of that subject and others bearing directly upon it."

"Such a system would not lower the standard of our high schools. It would not interfere with the courses for the men who intend to go to college, but it would provide for that large majority of pupils who must go directly from the high school into their life work."

He said there was no place where waterway problem was quite as important as in the Mississippi valley, and ultimately the river was certain to be improved.

Discussing the waterway improvement question, he said waterways cheapened from three to four times the cost of transportation of bulky commodities. He said a well thought out scheme of improvement was essential to control the terminals in the interest of water traffic, otherwise the railroads would control them. He insisted improvement of the waterways would help, not hurt, the railroads.

St. Louis gave the former President a most strenuous day. He arrived at 7:30 and was escorted by police and a committee of citizens to the Jefferson Hotel. After the breakfast of the Business Men's League he was taken to the Art Museum and through the West End.

Today the colonel was pretty well surrounded by stand-patters. At the breakfast, Governor Hadley, a progressive, sat on his right hand, while the other boys between the ages of sixteen and eighteen years, were tried before Judge Aukam, of the United States branch of the District Court, this morning for the robbery of Joseph Roosen, an old soldier, on the Monument Lot on the night of October 5.

The old soldier was the first to take the stand. He testified that he was standing on the corner of Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue when Pitsey came along and asked him to buy him something to eat. He said the boy didn't look hungry, but he took him into a lunch room and bought him some sandwiches.

"When I stepped out on the street again two more boys joined themselves to the one that was with me, and they started to quarrel," said Roosen. "Black persuaded the boys not to have a fight there, and suggested that they all go over to the Monument Lot, taking me with them as referee, and there they could settle their heart's content. All unsuspecting, I went. Arriving on the grassy lot the three boys began to make fake passes at each other. There wasn't a blow struck with serious intent. Suddenly, while I was watching them, all three began to punch me, and as I went down under the rain of blows, one of them put his hand into my pocket and grabbed my purse, containing over $7. I reported the incident to the police department immediately."

Officer Howes, who made the arrests, told on the stand the boys admitted to him, when questioned, that they had stolen the purse, although Black, the one who snatched it, said there was only $1.25 in it. The court decided to hold them on a $1,000 bond each for the action of the grand jury.

Black was held once before for attempted housebreaking, but was freed on his personal bond.
